

Coconut Products

Coconut-based products have displayed a solid global export growth in five years. The industry has registered a high earning for the agricultural commodities with $2.016 billion. This growth attests to the rising global demand for healthier food alternatives and eco-friendly products.

Major traditional coconut products include copra, copra meal, coconut oil, desiccated coconut, coconut shell charcoal, activated carbon, and oleochemicals. The Philippines is the leading supplier of coconut oil in the global market as its export growth is 133% from 2009 to 2013.

There are also non-traditional coconut products like coco chemicals and coconut food and non-food products. Coconut food products exported include fresh coconuts, grated coco meat, coco flour, nata de coco, coconut water, coconut milk powder, liquid coconut milk, makapuno, frozen coco meat, coconut chips, and coco jam. Coconut water has achieved an export growth of 21% from 2009 to 2013. It is the top coconut food export for 2013 followed by coco flour and nata de coco. The United States, Australia, the Netherlands, and Singapore are the top buyers for coconut water. The United States, Korea and Australia are the major importers of coco flour while Japan, Hong Kong, and the United States are the major destinations of nata de coco.

The country also exports coconut non-food coconut products to major markets. It exports coco shell powder, virgin coconut oil, hydrogenated coconut oils, coco handicrafts, and coco coir. These products registered an export growth of 2,034% from 2009 to 2013. Major export destinations for coco coir are China, Korea and Japan. Canada and the United States are the major importing markets of virgin coconut oil from our country.
